

Monday, Jan 08, 2018

Oakland Center is open today - following water main break over the weekend

According to Oakland Center director Chris Reed, the Oakland Center is back open and running following a water main break over the weekend.

One note of interest: Au Bon Pain is open, but has been re-located from its normal location to the area across the hall for the time being (former Grizz Express location).

The Oakland Center was closed over the weekend due to a water main break, but is now open and available to the campus community.