

OUCARES

Oakland University
Center for Autism Research, Education and Support

Evening
Enrichment Series

josh stokes

looking through the eye of the puzzle

Thursday, April 16, 2015
6:00-7:30pm

Lake Michigan Room in the Oakland Center
Oakland University

Josh Stokes, a successful college student with autism, will discuss what life is truly like through the eyes of someone who has autism. Josh gets the audience to participate in order to demonstrate the many differences and challenges that people on the spectrum face in a neurotypical world. This presentation will be especially beneficial for siblings of individuals with ASD to put them “in a brief moment of what it is like to be autistic using real examples and stories of my life.” People with ASD are encouraged to attend as well.

This event is designed for individuals with autism, their parents, siblings, and extended family, as well as educators and therapists of people on the spectrum.

Space is limited so please RSVP by emailing oucaries@oakland.edu or call 248-370-2424.

Oakland University™