The Office of Research Administration is inviting all Oakland University community members, as well as the general public, to attend “Being a Public Scholar: What’s Love Got to Do with It?” an upcoming “Soundings Series” event featuring Sociology Professor Terri Orbuch, also known as “The Love Doctor.”

The event, which will take place from 3-4:30 p.m. Sept. 13 in the Oakland Room at the Oakland Center, features Dr. Orbuch as an example of a faculty member successfully taking their research out of the lab, the field, the archive, or the studio and using it to make a positive difference in the world.

“We are thrilled to have Dr. Orbuch share her expertise and discuss how she has brought her research into the world through so many venues, including books, TV, radio, and online,” said Leanne DeVreugd, program assistant for Women in Science, Engineering, and Research (WISER) at Oakland University. “Her experience can provide valuable tips for faculty who want to be publicly engaged scholars.”

During the event, Orbuch will talk about her research, and about how she has taken her message out of the lab and brought it to the public through a wide range of media outlets and approaches. Orbuch has been cited in thousands of articles and authored six books, including, “5 Simple Steps to Take Your Marriage from Good To Great” and “Finding Love Again: 6 Simple Steps to a New and Happy Relationship.” She is also the director of a landmark study, funded by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), where she has been following the same 373 couples for almost three decades.

“I had an epiphany about a decade ago while pouring through fascinating data on marriage and reading the findings from my long-term project on relationships,” she said. “It was this: few of the people who can really use great information about marriage and relationships ever get to see, learn about, and benefit from the findings of my research and that of other relationship scientists. It's a shame that such great information was read by only a few.

“So, I coined myself as ‘The Love Doctor,’ and now I bring my research findings to real couples in the form of highly practical tips and easy to understand approaches.”

For more information about the “Soundings Series” event, contact DeVreugd at idevreug@oakland.edu.